Notable Memories	Experiences that have shaped your life, or fond memories.
Childhood	Being considered a "bad" kid for most of my childhood and then having to prove that I could stand out from everyone else in a positive way, however it was a hard experience because I learned to notice that no matter how hard you try sometimes you can not change perceptions. This all ended in me realizing that instead of trying to impress people I should try to start working on what can impress me and make me feel peaceful with myself.
Elementary School	Having that experience of starting rough in my first years and then evolving into a better version of me and even getting recognition from teachers and staff that made me proud of myself. Overall it was a hard process I had to go through but at the end it just felt worth it since I got more than I could ever imagine from it.
Middle School	My middle school years were hard since I had a lot of problems with students that made fun of me just because the way I express myself, all of these attacks against who I was caused me to really hide myself from the things I really wanted to do. All of this situation was worsened by the Pandemic which hit me in the middle of these years and made me go through a very lonely time.
High School	High School was the moment when I realized that if I was actually myself and people saw that I embraced who I was and what I represented then people are interested by that. Throughout my high school years I've found ways to express myself that had never been through my mind before, have made friends that support me and love me, and overall grown to be a what I consider mature student in my life.
Work History	Since I can remember I have always had that drive to work and gain what I have with my own effort. From fifth grade to tenth grade I had my own business in which I sold chips in my neighborhood and nearby neighborhoods, this business worked so well that I got to buy my first phone which I still use this day. I am extremely grateful that my parents always allowed me to grow in this regard and embraced my love for having a business. Before my Junior year in high school, one of my old and most attentive clients offered me a job at his burger restaurant during the summer, and that opportunity allowed me to gain more knowledge.
Inspiring Experience	Going to school in Mexico my whole life and then transferring to an American school in my Junior year was such a life-changing moment that really opened my mind and world to new experiences I thought I could never have before.
